What did I learn today
in my MFL
lesson?

Students should be given a sheet each. They begin by thinking about a question and jotting their ideas down in the centre box. They then discuss their ideas with their partner and write down new ideas that they hear. Then they get together as a group or class and share more ideas adding the rest to the outside box.

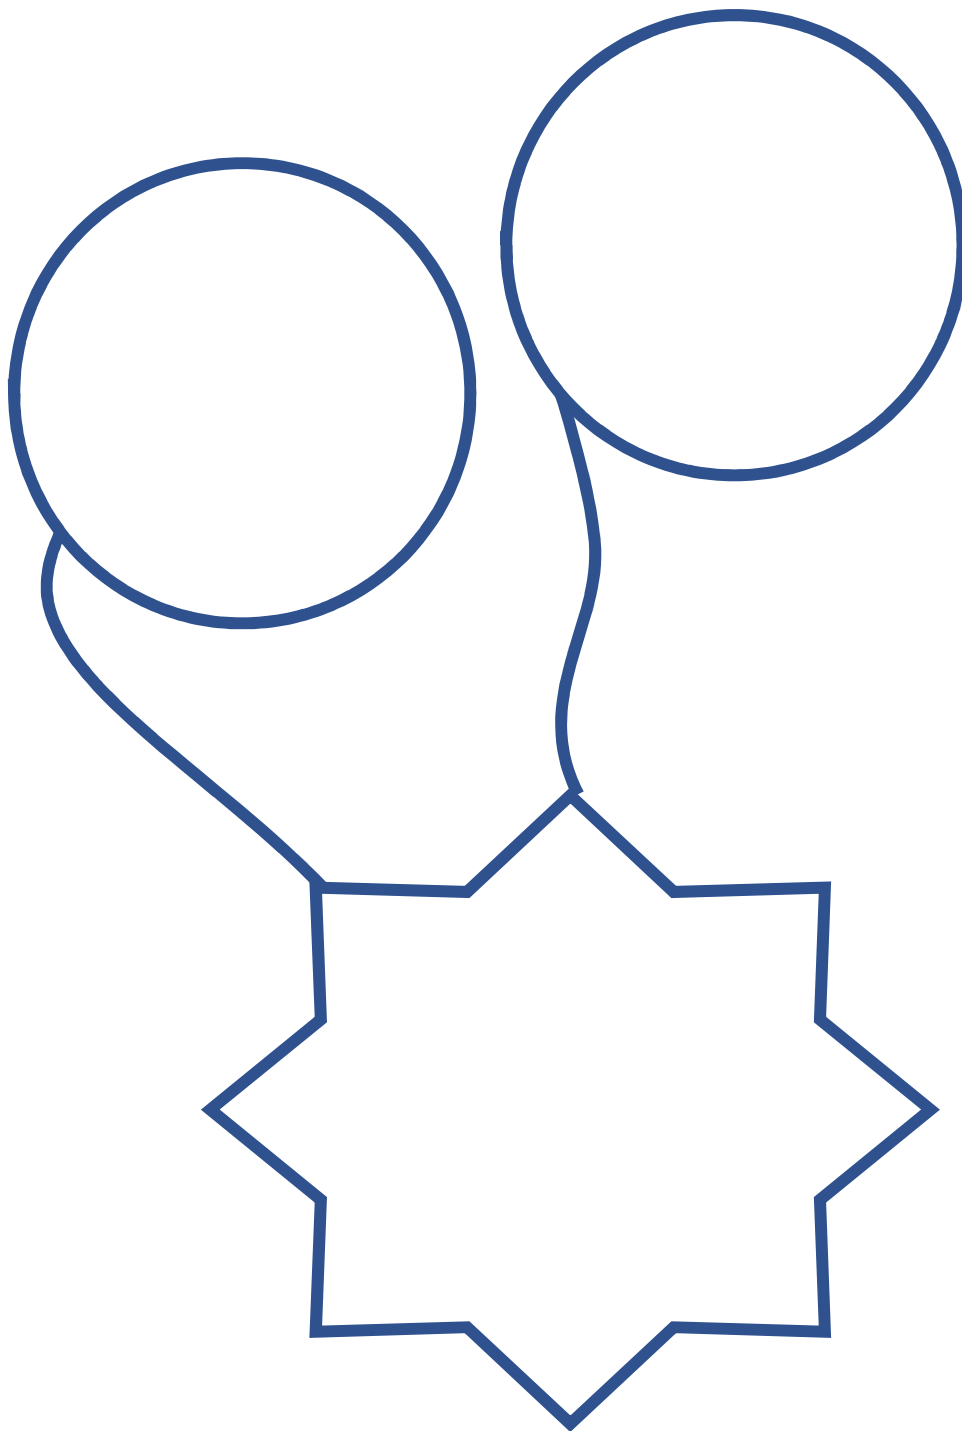

My current progress is:

This is for the 'sprint retrospective' activity

My goal is:

DELETE THIS BOX

TO get students to create sentence-stem response diagrams, you provide them with a starter sentence in the middle in English or the Target Language. Students then have to complete the sentence as many times as they can drawing more lines and circles as necessary.
